How to Print

For the Best Results

Paper: Print on 80lb white card stock for a premium, durable feel. Regular printer paper works too, but card stock holds up better on your fridge or in a recipe binder.

Size: This PDF is designed for US Letter (8.5 x 11 inches).

Layout: Each page has two recipe cards. Cut along the center line to separate them into individual 8.5 x 5.5 inch cards.

Printer: Set your printer to 'Actual Size' or '100%' — don't scale to fit.

Color: Print in color for the best experience. The food photos and macro circles really pop on card stock.

What's Inside

- 20 keto dessert recipe cards with full macros
- Every recipe under 7g net carbs
- Storage tips and ingredient swaps on every card
- 5-Minute Dessert Emergency List (10 quick recipes)
- Keto Pantry Staples Checklist
- Sweetener Conversion Chart
- Recommended tools and ingredients with shopping links
- Personal thank you from Sarah

What You'll Need

Look, I'm not going to pretend I don't have an Amazon problem. My delivery driver knows me by name. But the upside of my shopping habit is that I've tested every brand, every tool, and every weird specialty ingredient so you don't have to. I linked the exact products I actually use on the page below. Full honesty: yes, I get a small bonus if you shop through these links, but I wouldn't recommend something I haven't personally bought, used, and repurchased at least twice.

Thank You!

for choosing Sarah's Low-Carb Kitchen

Hey there! I'm Sarah, and I'm so glad you grabbed this recipe pack.

Every single recipe in here is one I actually make at home. Some came from happy accidents, some from clients who needed a sweet fix, and some from late nights when I refused to break ketosis but desperately needed chocolate. They're all real, they're all tested, and they all work.

I hope these become part of your rotation. Print them out, stick them on your fridge, toss them in a binder. Make a mess in the kitchen. That's what they're for.
